This monograph looks at how tax is intertwined with constitutional law and the state in the UK. It looks at a variety of topics including tax devolution, scrutiny and reform of tax legislation, the protection of taxpayers and the domestic legal processing of international rules and problems. Tax Law, State-Building and the Constitution presents and interrogates five key claims. First, there is a clear overlap between the concerns of tax and constitutional lawyers. Secondly, the tax system is being deeply affected by the fast pace of constitutional change. Thirdly, decisions taken in the tax field are likely to have a reverse influence on the evolution of the constitution. Fourthly, these relationships are heavily context-dependent, with tax making all the difference to some ongoing constitutional controversies whilst having very little to do with others. Fifthly, by acknowledging tax as an important moving part within the contemporary constitution we might understand both tax and constitutional law a little better. The book therefore contributes to deeper theoretical debates on the identity of tax law as a discipline, the relevance of tax to public lawyers, the meaning of state-building in the recent history of a developed country and the importance of public finances to a wider sense of 'what is going on'. These are questions that ought to command the attention of tax and constitutional law academics as well as policy makers and reformers.

This book is an exhaustive analysis and commentary on the GST structure implemented in India, based on the provisions of the Constitution (One Hundred and First Amendment) Act 2016, Central GST Act, 2017, Integrated Act, 2017, States' GST Acts, 2017, Union Territory GST Act, 2017, GST (Compensation to the States) Act, 2017 and Rules made thereunder, rates, exemptions etc. respectively (cumulatively referred as GST Laws). Our GST does not work in isolation - it must align with international best practices and the way in which GST/ VAT works in other countries. This framework and comparison is useful in giving points of principle and direction as India's GST system matures. It provides a comparative analysis of the Indian GST framework and the international best practices and principles of taxation discussed extensively in the OECD's International GST/VAT Guidelines
